

S. Riepl, J. J. Eckl, G. Herold, A. Leidig

Autonomous tracking with High Repetition Rate Systems

High repetition SLR systems are very suitable for autonomous operation, because they provide sufficient feedback loop gain for the telescope servo operations. Once the SOS-W telescope became operational and started to contribute to the ILRS operations, we have started to implement autonomous tracking functions in order to support the simultaneous operation of more than one SLR system from the main console at the same time.